SCOTS MAY CAUSE STIR

Scotland's 3-2 win over England at Wembley last Saturday was just the tonic the Scots needed before their tour of Asia and Australia.

However, the team we will see here may be quite different from the one that beat England, due to circumstances beyond the Scottish FA's control.

Celtic have won 3-1 their first European Champions' Cup semifinal tie against Dukla Prague and look set to fight their way into the final in the return match in Prague.

This will be held in Lisbon, Portugal, on May 25.

Should Celtic make it — and there is a better than even money chance that they will — Gemmell and McNeill, their two Scotland selections, are certain to miss at least the start of the tour, including the first match in Sydney on May 28.

There is an even bigger danger that four others, all from Leeds, may be forced to pull out.

They are Bell, Bremner, Lorimer and Gray.

Leeds have now reached the FA Cup semifinal where they meet Chelsea at Birmingham.

If they win, they will play in the final at Wembley on May 20 and then it's a question whether these four will be able to join the Scottish party, due to leave London on May 15 for Israel, Malaysia, Hong Kong and Australia.

Sydney fans, while wishing the Scots every luck in the world, still keep their fingers crossed — and gaze distantly towards Prague and Birmingham where the crucial semifinals will soon take place. — Paul Dean

CONTEST NO. 3 BEGINS

You swamped us — we are submerged in coupons.

Section 2 of our Contest which closed last week attracted hundreds of entries.

Many readers sent in up to a dozen and scores of envelopes came with twos and threes — obviously from those keen to win the Alitalia trip to Italy.

Section 3 starts in this issue — and closes with next week's, so you have to hurry.

The results of Section 2, of course, cannot be announced until all the State championships have finished — but Section 3 results will be published in our May 11 edition.

Crack Brazilians may meet us next Oct.

— From IAN PETRIE in Hong Kong —

Australia may take part in a three-way tournament in Hong Kong later this year, together with the crack Brazilian team, Flamengo, the 1965 Rio champions.

Hong Kong venue

The Brazilians have repeatedly offered to play here.

And strange as it may sound, they are asking for less per match than Australia.

Two Flamengo stars played for Brazil in the 1966 World Cup: fullback Paulo Henrique and centre forward Silva.

Other full internationals include fullbacks Ditao and Murilo, winghalf Carlinhos and forwards Ademar, Oswaldo, Ailton and Rodrigues.

Hong Kong certainly hopes to see the Australians when they make their Asian tour later this year.

They created a most favorable impression in 1965, despite the riotous scenes in the December 3 match against the Chinese League XI, which they won 3-1.

Hong Kong FA secretary Joseph Wong said this week negotiations with Australia were still going on.

Should the Australians return this year, they will face a different team and atmosphere.

Optimism is the order of the day in Hong Kong soccer circles as the Colony's thousands of soccer fans bask in the reflected glory of Hong Kong's recent victory in the Central Zone of the Asian Cup.

Hong Kong went through the series at the Government Stadium undefeated.

For one glorious week a packed stadium (capacity 28,000) thrilled to the giant-killing feats of the local team.

Hong Kong beat South Vietnam, the 1966 Merdeka champions, Singapore, 1966 Asian Games semifinalists, Malaysia and Thailand to finish three points ahead of runners-up Malaysia.

After many years in the doldrums, Hong Kong soccer has made a triumphant comeback.

Youth policy

The most pleasing aspect of Hong Kong's renaissance is the emphasis which has been placed on youth in recent internationals.

Until 1965 Hong Kong still relied on the Colony's "old guard" — players who had been around for years.

The lack of fresh, young talent to take their places made it impossible for the selectors to infuse much-needed new blood into the national team.

Two years ago, however, the Hong Kong FA embarked

Ian Petrie, a Scotsman, is the soccer writer for Hong Kong's English language daily newspaper, TIGER STANDARD. He is also a qualified English FA coach and a high-ranking Hong Kong FA official.

on a bold, progressive youth policy.

Out went the "stars", all of whom were in their early thirties, and in came — en bloc — the Colony's youth team, fresh from impressive performances at the Asian Youth Championships.

Aussies welcome

No effort was spared to ensure that those young players, destined to wear Hong Kong's colours for years to come, enjoyed the best training facilities.

For the first time Hong Kong embarked on a true national team policy.

Many hours a week are devoted to physical and tactical conditioning, and for the past 18 months the squad was "nursed" along, gaining experience in a series of friendly matches against touring club sides.

A taste of the triumph that was to follow came when the young Hong Kong team twice came within grasp of snatching draws against the Czech team, Sparta Prague, earlier this year.

After a triumphant tour of Australia and New Zealand, where they won by very wide margins, the Czechs barely won through in Hong Kong.

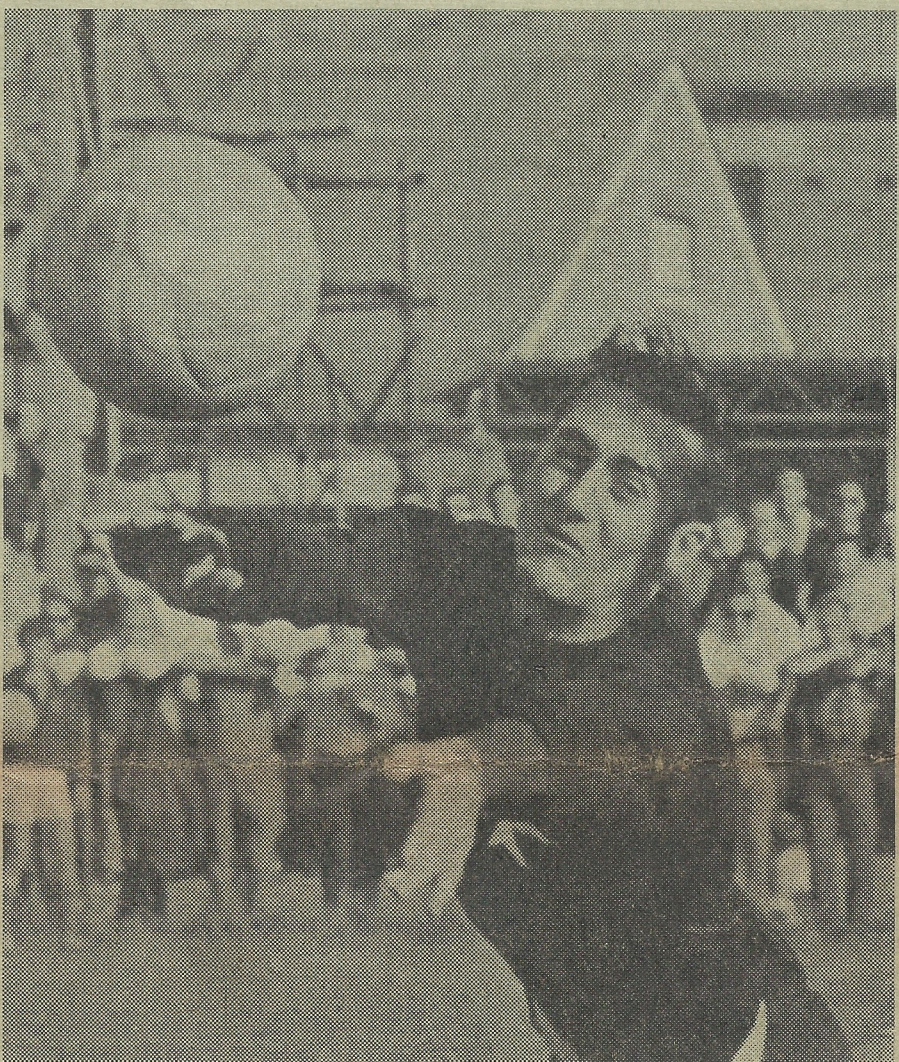

Hong Kong fans are now clamoring for more international matches — not only against club sides, but against national teams in the area.

So Australia should not miss the opportunity to visit us again.

Fans here have had their appetite whetted by Hong Kong's Asian Cup victory and would turn out in their thousands to see their new idols take on the Australians and the colorful Brazilians.

Should the Australians return this year they will encounter totally different tactics.

The "new look" Hong Kong team plays a bright, attacking game, throws caution to the winds and has no elaborate defensive schemes.

TERRY EATON, Melita Eagles' English-born goalkeeper has had a spectacular rise to prominence in 1967. Until the end of 1965 he was Rorke's deputy at Bankstown, then joined Melita Eagles and played a big part in their promotion-winning campaign last year. The tall, agile custodian (picture above) was one of the heroes of his team at Lambert Park against APIA last Sunday. Eaton, surprisingly, has been overlooked by the Australian and NSW selectors, but on current form he must rate as Sydney's top custodian.

BOOK NOW!

Advance bookings for both Scotland and Manchester United will open sometime next week.

Tickets will be available at all usual booking agencies and at the NSW Federation office.

Watch for actual booking details in SOCCER WORLD.

APIA set hot pace at top

After the completion of a fourth NSW First Division competition round, highlighted by shock results, near-upsets and mammoth scores, APIA are already firmly entrenched at the top of the NSW ladder.

Last year's premiers have full points and a two-point lead over Pan Hellenic and Croatia — the only other unbeaten side in the competition.

Pan Hellenic have got off to their best-ever competition start and are scoring more goals than ever before.

Hakoah have started the season quietly — just as last year when they only secured second place at the halfway turn.

Croatia, like Pan Hellenic, are an entirely different proposition this year.

Prague's bubble burst last week against Cumberland, but the loss of key defenders disorganised the team.

We'll have to wait for the result of this week's match against Hakoah to know whether Prague will have to content themselves with a middle-of-the-table role or whether they can challenge seriously for "top four" honors.

The Yugal-Melita Eagles game this weekend is vital to both teams. A win for Yugal would enable them to rejoin the leaders, a defeat would send them tumbling down the middle of the ladder together with Melita Eagles who seem destined for the lower reaches of the table, their plucky display against APIA notwithstanding.

St. George-Budapest seem to have somewhat picked themselves up from the floor.

They are now within striking distance of the leaders and their future is much less gloomier.

South Coast are maintaining a respectable position thanks to sound "away" tactics, while Cumberland, always hard to beat at Mona Park, showed there is still plenty of life left in them.

Canterbury, pointless at the foot of the ladder, are already in big bother and have king-size headaches in store unless they strengthen their inexperienced team drastically.

SYDNEY CLUB PATROL

Frank Broome, the recently appointed Melita Eagles coach, may return to England. According to a London report struggling Fourth Division club Exeter have sacked their manager, Jock Bashford and contacted Broome as his possible successor. Broome managed Exeter from 1958 to 1960.

APIA have signed a new Italian forward, JULIANO VIRANNO, from Pro Vercelli, a Fourth Division club which many years ago was just as famous as Inter Milan is today. Viranno, a surveyor by trade, was born in Turin and has only been in Sydney for a month.

Judging on advance bookings and the great interest already shown at this stage in the MANCHESTER UNITED and SCOTLAND matches, both tours should be roaring successes. NSW Federation secretary, Aulden Brown, is already flooded with inquiries and large-scale bookings. Dozens of factories have booked rows of seats through their social clubs and hundreds of bookings from Newcastle and Brisbane have been lodged for the Australia-Scotland international.

ARCHIE BLUE's wife, May, gave birth to a baby boy last Monday at Balmain Hospital. The boy is the Blues' first child.

Prague official BILL BALL visited former NSW Federation secretary JOE BRUNA in Los Angeles last week. Both went to see a "warm-up" Professional US League match and were appalled at the standard. In a letter to Prague secretary, George Warner, Ball writes that soccer has no future whatsoever in the US if that is the football which will be dished out to American fans.

PAUL VLAHOS, a Pan Hellenic committeeman, left on the same plane as former club president, Andrew Carr, for a holiday in Greece.

The NSW management committee has fixed yet another transfer fee for Canterbury's DENIS YAAGER:

$3,000. The originally set fee was $6,000. This was first reduced to $4,000, then on further appeal to $2,000. Now the club appealed and the fee is back to $3,000. The question is: when will this childish haggling all end?

ST. GEORGE-BUDAPEST will hold their grand 10th year anniversary ball next month.

PAN HELLENIC hope to send their team to Greece and the Middle East in December this year. Former club officials, Andrew Carr and Paul Vlahos, now in Greece, will attempt to tee up the proposed trip.

The NSW section of the Australian squad has now been bumped up to 30 with the late inclusions of Giles (Croatia), Blitz (Pan Hellenic), Blue (APIA) and Dennis Yager (Canterbury). The latter's selection is astonishing, to say the least, as he has only played one match — in Canterbury's first team — since his return from the UK.

Prague's THIRD GRADE dressing room resembled a battlefield after their match against Cumberland last Saturday at Mona Park. Three lads were seriously injured and two had to be taken to the local hospital. However, both were released after a brief observation.

The NSW SQUAD trains every Tuesday night at the Sydney Showground, where both matches against Manchester United will be played in June. The current squad of 19 will be reduced to 14 seven days before the first international, on June 7.

Hakoah had a successful dinner-card party at the Manhattan Hotel last Saturday through the courtesy of club patrons, Mr. and Mrs. M. GOULD.

Referee ARTHUR BROWN wants to thank all well-wishers who sent him telegrams and phoned in during the illness which kept him in hospital for three weeks two and a half months ago.

HEINZ RINGHOFF, Yugal's wandering utility player, is thought to be in Newcastle these days. Ringhoff hasn't turned up for training in the last fortnight and is reported to have been seen training with Lake Macquarie, the Newcastle club.

One of the enthralled spectators last week at Lambert

Park was former APIA coach JOE MARSTON, now with Western Suburbs.

VIC LOWRIE and COLIN BEARDS, the two talented teenagers who have spent 12 months as "apprentices" in Czechoslovakia with Slovan Bratislava, return on May 7. By all accounts both have improved out of sight and Prague are looking forward to adding them to their already youthful first team.

APIA's skipper, FILIPPO BOTTALICO, has sold his Ampol garage. He now works for Transfield under the supervision of APIA vice-president Vic Cappelletto. Transfield also employs APIA reserve graders Mike Mazzina and Juliano Viranno.

Granville have signed inside-left ANDRIES TOMA, who comes from the Austrian regional club Olimpia. They also signed outside-left MICHAEL O'NEILL from Cumberland United. Both had very good games against Balgownie, Toma scoring three goals.

A Yugoslav-born forward, VESIC, who played with a London amateur team for the last five years, joins Yugal this weekend. Vesic settled in England in 1962 and is reported to be a useful goal-getter.

Prague expect to sign the former Corinthians defender, MOULSON, in time for Sunday's match against Hakoah.

POLONIA-NORTH SIDE last week made First Division history by electing a WOMAN CLUB TREASURER. The position went to Miss Alexandra Lederer, who replaces John Komander, who resigned because of business commitments. Miss Lederer, however, is not the only woman on Polonia's management committee as Mrs Debowski is in charge of the club's social activities.

The TECHNICAL COMMITTEE of the NSW Coaches Federation met last weekend to complete plans for a uniform, Australia-wide preliminary and intermediate level coaching scheme. The committee, chaired by Joe Vlasits, included Josef Venglos, Bill Vrolyks, Harry Preece, Joe Kuruc, Tiko Jelicavcic and Frank Wimmer.

A couple of Second Division clubs have made offers for Polonia's GINTER GAWLIK, but their bids fell short of the $3,000 transfer fee placed on his head.

ANTON MORAVCIK, the Czech international forward who had such a wretched season with Prague last year, returns home by ship on May 17. Moravcik hasn't played at all this year.

HERBERT NINAUS is likely to be included in Hakoah's forward line on Sunday against Prague for the first time since his Ampol Cup injury. The irrepressible Austrian goalgrabber resumed training this week.

BANKSTOWN will transfer many of their home matches to Friday night games when Bankstown Oval is soon FLOODLIT. Bankstown Oval will be the sixth Sydney ground capable of handling night football. The others are Marks Field, Sportsground, Showground, Lidcombe Oval and Redfern Oval.

JIM STEWART, a Scottish professional on the books of Glasgow Rangers, joins Hakoah this weekend. Stewart, a forward, was on Rangers' retained list for the last two seasons.

APIA's new Argentinian centre-forward, RUBEN RIVERO, is a shoemaker by trade. He is employed in a shoe factory by an APIA official.

BOBBY CHARLTON will present an autographed football to the best under-16 player in the State before the Manchester United v. NSW match on Sunday, June 18.

The CROATIA v. PAN HELLENIC match on Anzac Day has been switched from Erskineville Oval to Marks Field.

SLAVKO PACANIN, the former Yugal left winger, wants to return to Australia. Pacanin, now in Yugoslavia, has asked Yugal to obtain a re-entry visa for him.

SUTHERLAND'S RESERVES a fortnight ago beat MANLY 4-1, not the reverse as we printed in error.

"Phantoms" fleece Sparta

The American Professional League club, "Phantoms" Pittsburgh, have signed two top Europeans for the coming US season which kicked off last week. They are Danish international centre-forward, Ole Madsen, who plays for Sparta Rotterdam, in Holland, and Theo Lazeroms, also from Sparta. Madsen received a $20,000 contract and Lazeroms a $10,000 one. Lazeroms, however, was fined $1,500 by a Dutch civil court for breaking his contract with Sparta and is threatened with imprisonment when he returns to Holland unless he pays up within 60 days.

H.H. has credo

Inter Milan's brilliantly successful coach, Helenio Herrera says players must be taught to think during a match. "Amateurs can still afford the luxury of playing the game," he says, "but professionals must win at any cost".

Santos in Europe

The Brazilian Santos will visit Sweden, Italy, France, Czechoslovakia, West Germany and Spain during their summer European tour. One basic condition of their tour contract: Pele must play...

Pals again

The Italians went to great lengths to end the old feud between their two stars, Corso and Rivera. Before the recent international against Portugal, they put up the two players in the same hotel room.

Goalie's record transfer fee

West Ham United have paid a world record transfer fee of $150,000 for a goalkeeper by signing Bobby Ferguson of Kilmarnock. Ferguson has been picked in the Scotland team which will tour Australia next month. He will remain with Kilmarnock while they are still in the Fair Cities' Cup.

H. H. to Madrid?

Helenio Herrera and Inter Milan may soon part. Recently Herrera admitted that having won just about everything with Inter, his incentive is running out. The pending retirement of Inter president, Signor Moratti, is another contributing factor. Herrera is likely to accept a lucrative offer from Real Madrid where his signing-on fee alone would equal seven years of his present salary. With Spanish taxation being much milder than the Italian, Herrera would earn three times more in Madrid than in Milan.

African Nations' Cup

Algeria and the United Arab Republic have qualified for the final pool of the African Nations' Cup. Other nations likely to qualify are Guinea, Tunisia, Ivory Coast and Sudan. Ghana, the holders, and Ethiopia, the host country, qualify automatically for the finals which will be staged early next year at Addis-Abeba.

Inter Milan woos Beckenbauer

Franz Beckenbauer, the brilliant West German halfback, is a frequent visitor to Milan these days. The Bayern Munchen star was invited by Inter Milan to watch their recent "derby" clash with AC Milan and immediately set tongues wagging in both Italy and Germany. There is, however, no chance of him playing for Inter as long as the Italian ban on foreigners is still enforced, but he seems certain to join Herrera's team the moment the ban is lifted — perhaps in 1969.

● Brazilian international forward Gerson will soon leave Botafogo to join Vasco de Gama. The proposed transfer fee is $100,000.

● Gert Muller (Bayern Munchen) scored four goals for West Germany when they beat Albania 6-0 in a European Nations' Cup match at Dortmund last week.

Bulgaria's big boom

Bulgarian soccer, with clubs in the semi-finals of both the European Champions and Cupwinners Cups, is also enjoying a tremendous boom at home. Crowds are bigger than ever before and after 21 rounds attendances are up 105,000 on last season. The boom has also spread to the hinterland and a provincial club, Botev Plovdiv, is heading the competition ahead of Sofia's "big three": Slavia, Levski and Red Banner.

Fabbri's comeback

Italy's former team-manager Edmondo Fabbri will soon be back in action. His suspension ends at the end of the month and he hopes to join a leading club, probably AC Milan or Bologna. Fabbri was suspended for six months for his conduct and statements after Italy's disastrous 1966 World Cup campaign.

Penarol's grand tour

Intercontinental champions, Penarol Montevideo, will undertake a world tour next month, which will take them to the United States (Los Angeles and Chicago), where they will play Brazilian teams Palmeiras and Bangu; Italy (Turin); Spain (Atletico Madrid); England (Tottenham, Liverpool) and Scotland (Hearts of Midlothian).

UEFA gets tough

Alarmed at disturbances at some European Champions and Cupwinners Cup matches, the UEFA last week fined two clubs. Bayern Munchen, of West Germany, were fined $600 for their officials' failure to maintain order when they met Rapid Vienna and Atletico Madrid have to pay $400 as a result of incidents in their European Cup match against Vojvodina before Christmas. Both clubs will be barred from ever taking part in European competitions again should incidents reoccur at their home matches.

Heads and corners

When East Germany beat Holland 4-3 at Leipzig in a European Nations' Cup match two weeks ago all four German goals came from corner kicks and all four were headers!

● One of France's leading amateur clubs, AS Brest, will turn professional next season. Toulouse, once a leading First Division club, on the other hand is seriously contemplating to disband because of lack of finance.

● Gordon Banks, England's World Cup goalie, may transfer from Leicester next season. Banks is tipped to join Arsenal or West Ham.

● Yugoslavia and West Germany will clash in the European Nations' Cup on May 3. The whole match will be televised live on Eurovision.

● Emilio Alvarez, the Nacional and Uruguay full-back, has retired. Nacional's thousands of socios raised $30,000 to buy him a new home in a fashionable Montevideo suburb.

● Manchester United was the only English club prepared to allow the live transmission of matches in 1967-68. The other professional clubs, however, knocked back the BBC's $2,250,000 offer.

● Szalai and Kaszas, two Spanish-based Hungarians, have joined the Philadelphia club, Spartans, in the USA.

● Benfica will sign Jorge Mendonca, Atletico Madrid's Portuguese winger, next season. Mendonca is returning to Portugal for this two-year compulsory training in the army.

SUMMING UP THE MATCHES

Match rating: * *

An own goal by Max Tolson six minutes from fulltime saved Hakoah from a humiliating defeat. Hakoah have only themselves to blame for dropping a precious point. Their forwards gave a pathetic display despite a huge territorial advantage throughout. South Coast played an unspectacular, defensive game. Both teams dished up mediocre, unattractive soccer and look anything but "top four" contenders at this stage.

Cumberland won a fast, exciting incident-packed game in great style. Playing with the wind in the first half, Prague should have held a commanding 4-0 lead at the break as both defence and attack combined to produce some dazzling football. The second half developed into a battle of pushing, kicking and punching between players which resulted in four being sent off. Cumberland played as a team inspired in the second half and only luck saved the disorganised Prague from a bigger defeat.

As one-sided a match as any you may wish to see, this game was still eminently entertaining thanks to Pan Hellenic's lively display. Pan Hellenic held the initiative from the kick-off but it took them 45 minutes to convert their superiority into goals. This they did in devastating, exciting style after the interval, swamping their demoralised opponents. Pan Hellenic's halfback pair of Westwater and McCulloch reigned supreme throughout and played the major part in the team's superb performance.

Croatia played this match like certain semifinalists. Their forwards responded to the continued promptings of Vic Reynolds who scored one goal, set up others and bobbed up everywhere without taking a breather. Croatia's defence was masterful and only in midfield was there any looseness. Canterbury made a game of it by contesting every ball. The team is obviously proud to be back in First Division, but badly lacked effective strikers.

Though still lacking the resolution and sparkle of their Ampol Cup success, Saints always held the whip hand in an unexciting clash. Actually the main difference between the teams lay in their respective spearheads — Cliss and Joe Alagich. Cliss, back to his best, was a constant threat in the first half with his slide-rule passing and sharpness around the goalmouth. Alagich, on the other hand, found the task of "carrying" his forward-line too much. Play degenerated in the second half because of a rash of fouls.

Reminiscent of the heroic war-time defence of Malta, this Melita Eagles took a fantastic hammering for most of the match and yet gallantly stood their ground. APIA were clearly in command from go to whoa but the forwards couldn't find their target and when they could, there was always a leg or the remarkable Eaton to save the day. Melita's counter-raids were often dangerous; twice they hit the woodwork and five minutes from the end Azzopardi could have actually clinched the points. However, APIA's relentless attacks eventually wore down Melita, forcing them into small errors towards the end which ultimately decided the fate of this exciting tie.

SYDNEY SECOND DIVISION

NTH. BANKSTOWN TO BEAT DEPLETED WESTS

— By CHARLES SPITERI —

Hardly a week has passed since the start of the competition that one or more surprises were sprung upon the different teams contesting this division.

Division leaders Hornsby were held to a draw by lowly Marconi on their own ground and second placed Sutherland were beaten by the odd goal by lowly Corinthians.

Bottom - of - the - ladder Blacktown improved out of sight to be beaten by one goal and only sheer bad luck robbed them of at least a draw.

So after four rounds, we see the newly-promoted North Bankstown sharing the lead with Hornsby-North End — something unthought of five weeks ago.

Bankstown v.

Western Suburbs 5-1

Although full credit goes to Bankstown for a great display, their 5-1 win was not all that clear-cut.

Both teams played open soccer without any spoiling defensive tactics.

Western Suburbs went straight on the attack and nearly scored when Friedl had to save an awkward shot from close range. But Bankstown scored from the resulting goalkick and were two up at half time.

As soon as play resumed, Wests reduced the leeway but the Bankstown forwards were in great form and made good use of all their opportunities.

Western Suburbs had five injured players during the game and were forced to use Joe Marston in the second half, who already had played another half in the seconds.

Bankstown: Friedl; Fitzgerald, Jamieson; Turnbull, Hinkman, McDermott; Stiffle, Madden, Bamford (3), Price (1), Clarke (1).

Western Suburbs: Iro; Bastion, Apostilidis; Holmes, Bijkerk, Whyte; Chrystal, Bosklopper, Omoros, Davies, Smit (1).

Hornsby v.

Marconi 1-1

Hornsby failed to capitalise on their chances in a very defensive game.

Both goals were scored in the second half with Hornsby netting first soon after play resumed, when Bastas beat two defenders to score from close range.

Midway through the half Marconi equalised from a scrimmage in front of goal.

For the last 30 minutes Hornsby played with 10 men when they lost Dickerson through a knee injury.

Hornsby: McDonald; Lapwood, Vickers; Hogan, Armstrong, Booth; Horne, Davies, Bastas (1), Hughes, Dickerson.

Marconi: Langelaar; Napta, Latrec; Zorato, Milani, Morn; Tyrell, Okorn, Giacometti, Gardino, Speciale (1).

Manly v.

Lane Cove 3-0

After a scoreless heart-breaking first half, Manly managed to split the wall of Lane Cove defenders and score three quick goals in the last 20 minutes.

Once again, Lane Cove played another defensive game with as many as eight players always around the penalty area and only a three-man forward line.

Manly were in possession most of the time and dictated all midfield play while Lane Cove only relied on occasional break-aways.

Manly: Tuinman, McGrath, Brooks; Verrills, Campbell, Freeman; R. Jones, Harris, G. Jones (Ridding), Hughes (2), Waller.

Lane Cove: Reed; Clarke (own goal), Holmes; Mitchell, Gamble, Carter; Jagger, Kelly, Thomas, Aird, Thomson.

Corinthians v.

Sutherland 1-0

In a scrappy game at Jubilee Oval, Corinthians scored their first win of the season by upsetting the hitherto undefeated Sutherland.

The usually fast and smooth Sutherland forward line failed badly against Corinthians' defence.

No goals were scored in the first half and the winning goal came after 72 minutes when, against the run of play, a sudden attack by Corinthians caught the opposing defence out of position and Orr scored.

Corinthians: Griffin; R. Clarke, Noon; Smith, Herpe, McKnight; Fann-ings Amey, Orr (1), J. Clarke, Woods.

Sutherland: Gray, O'Brien, Rattenbury; Senior, O'Reilly, Shrubsole; P. Cuciti, Griffiths, Devine, Davidson, S. Cuciti.

Blacktown v.

Nth. Bankstown 0-1

Blacktown were very unlucky not to snatch their first point of the season.

This rugged game was played at a fast tempo and the ball was flashed from one end to the other of the field with bursts of speed from both sides but poor shooting kept the scoresheet blank at halftime.

The only goal of the match was scored in the 80th minute when outside-right Pitman outran the Blacktown defence to pass a perfect centre to the unmarked Roberts who sent a smashing drive into the net.

North Bankstown: Kerr; Baber, Watson; Scahill, Duncan, Cleverly; Pitman, Buckley, Roberts (1), Machetti, Mula.

Blacktown: Italo; Stone, McLaren; Cousins, Wilkins, Kelly; Bittle, Swina, English, Putre, McDonald.

Balgownie v.

Granville 3-5

In a thrilling first half in which six of the goals were scored, Balgownie were on top and led 3-2 after 15 minutes but Granville equalised just before the interval.

In the second half, the Granville forwards came out with more purpose and determination and scored two more goals to clinch the points.

The return of Lorenzutta to the pivot position made a big difference to the Granville defence.

Granville inside - left, Toma, who scored three good goals and had a hand in the other two, was the star of the match together with Balgownie's Worthington.

Granville: Murray, Bachks, Pendleton; Dean, Lorenzutta, Creilly; Gallagher, Day, Shepherd (2), Toma (3), O'Neill.

Balgownie: Jones, Thommeny, Isedale; Gibson, Christlo, D. Whitehead; Worthington (3), Simister, Large, Egbers, Kearton.

THIS WEEKEND

Highlights of this weekend will be clashes between Bankstown and Manly on Saturday and Sutherland and Hornsby-NE on Sunday.

Bankstown, back in top form, are favored to collect both points while a draw looks likely at Seymour Shaw Park, Miranda.

Corinthians are slight favorites to win their second match in a row against defence-conscious Lane Cove and Marconi, on present form, could well beat Balgownie, whose defence is conceding far too many goals.

The unbeaten Granville will not have things all their own way when they meet luckless, but rapidly improving Blacktown.

At Concord Oval the depleted Western Suburbs meet surprise-packet North Bankstown, the competition's co-leaders, with a win for the visitors most likely.

The following matches will be played on Anzac Day: Manly v. Granville; Corinthians v. North Bankstown; Hornsby-NE v. Blacktown; Western Suburbs v. Balgownie.

WITH THE AMATEURS ENMORE'S GOAL HARVEST -- 17!

— By KEITH GILMOUR —

Wentworthville celebrated the opening of their re-turfed playing pitch at Jones Park with a 3-0 win against Thistle last Sunday.

There was really very little between the two teams, but the Waratahs were on target in the first half.

In spite of their lowly position, Thistle have a well balanced side, which is bound to make its presence felt during the season.

North Sydney Inter now lead the First Division with a point margin over Ryde.

It is difficult to see any club stopping Enmore's winning run in Third Division, in spite of Condell Park also having gained maximum points so far.

At Mackey Park, Tempe, Enmore ran the young Greenacre team into the ground to the tune of a phenomenal 17 goals.

Enmore showed good ball control and shooting, but there seems to be a big gap in standard down to their reserve team, which could affect future results if injuries are encountered.

St. Marys registered a 3-1 win against Gladesville-Hornsby in their home match at Jamison Park.

They unsettled the visitors early, and ran to 3-0 at half time.

COOK'S TOUR OF MELBOURNE

LUCKY HAKOAH HAVE NO PROBLEM OF SCORING

— By BOB LOW —

While many clubs are trying every conceivable move to introduce a real "striker" to their attack, Hakoah are in the fortunate position of having two ready-made ones in inside forward Jim Armstrong and centre forward Ian Monan.

Both have different attributes which make for their success and that of the team.

Armstrong is a rangy and lanky inside-man with good ball control and with the happy knack of using the open space to the fullest advantage and so exploit to the full his deadly finishing shot.

Monan, who stands 6'3", is no fool at the skills of the game but it's his tremendous height and his ability to time the ball in the air which gives him a big advantage in opponents' goalmouths.

Both players joined Hakoah last season.

Armstrong came from Scotland and is a product of the Scottish juniors and played with Port Glasgow.

Monan, also a Scot, was bought before the transfer deadline in 1966 from USC Lions in Adelaide.

Of course, with a first class defence behind them and two good wingers who have the experience to sling over the right type of ball, the success of both Armstrong and Monan is due in no small measure to the stability and experience of the complete Hakoah side in general.

With an improvement in their playing staff, Alexander have the nucleus of a team which may give more than a few of the clubs in the State League a run for their money.

They have better than average defenders in Sam Service, Basil Kourkalakos and George Glennie while in attack newcomers Mike Bikas and Ron Brown blend well with John Backovic, Billy McIvor and Jim Mangopolous.

If Alexander are more settled now than they have ever been in the State League as a team, the same cannot be said of their administration which seems as bad or at least no better than in former years.

Trying to get the official line-ups from Alexander before a game at the weekends is the most frustrating job which any soccer reporter could wish for.

No one knows anything even 10 minutes before the game — officials don't even know if all their first team players have reported at the ground.

If it wasn't so serious it would really be amusing and one cannot even rely that a line-up they manage to give you just on kick-off time will be the one that takes the field.

It's pathetic really and just goes to show that there are two kinds of amateurs in this world.

If any club needs a shake up in its administration it is most certainly Alexander.

Since the season started Croatia have made no bones of the fact they want a top class centre half to replace former Melbourne player Tibby Becsi, who would step back to his former position at fullback.

They have had under continued watch Steve Walker of Lions who was Argus Medal runner-up in 1966 and who lately has been playing at inside forward for the Essendon side.

Croatia have made several overtures to Lions for Walker and at one time they offered Joe Keenan, since transferred to Cumberland, and Hugh Gunn, a reserve fullback, as a direct swap.

Croatia too have not discarded the idea of making a straight cash offer for Walker although never at any time have Lions suggested the player is for sale.

However, recent overtures by Lions for Mike Kovacek, the Croatia reserve keeper and Jimmy Vojtek, a right winger and brother of Billy Vojtek who is at present playing in the first team could be the cue for Croatia to make another move for Walker.

I doubt, however, if they will be any more successful than in the past.

The whole truth is Lions are so desperately short of good class players that to part with Walker would be tantamount to committing suicide and booking their place in the first division.

In the doldrums for many years as far as titles and pot hunting is concerned, Juventus have lost more support than any other State League side.

But now with a cracking start to the 1967 league season and prospects that they will be further strengthened soon with the return of Jim Molloy from Europe and the return of Eric Norman who has been off through injury, things are really looking up in the Juventus camp.

Should negotiations with John Charles ultimately succeed, the playing potential of the club should be second to none.

Makedonia Soccer Club, alive to the fact so early in the season that the team which won them promotion isn't good enough to keep them there, have in the past two weeks rocked the Melbourne soccer world by buying five new players of considerable quality and at a tremendous cost.

The quintet of newcomers are Tom Stankovic (JUST), Ian Currie (Croatia), Louis Ivanhoff (West Australia), David Short (Slavia) and Peter Craig (Box Hill).

So far Makedonia have not officially divulged the individual or collective cost of the five new players.

But from unofficial quarters I have been told that they have parted with something in the region of $5000 to bring four newcomers to their attack plus a new goalkeeper. I can reveal also that the Makedonia "kitty" is still not in the red and that they intend to spend another considerable sum in the local market by acquiring two good defenders.

Makedonia are not looking for bargains.

They only want value for the big fees they are lashing out and no one will deny that so far they have bought players of quality.

Never known as misers, the George Cross management after a dismal 1966 season have embarked on a huge spending spree and with their lack of success in the new season there are no signs so far that they have closed their purse strings.

The club has concluded these big-money signings in an all-out effort to lift the side to its former glories:

● Reuben Evans, inside forward who was on the books of Glasgow Rangers for five years was flown from Ireland after he had been playing in South Africa. Evans, injured in a friendly match against Hellas, made his first league appearance of the season against Juventus.

Newcomers suffer from usual teething troubles

— From ALLAN CRISP in Adelaide —

Newly promoted Adelaide clubs, Elizabeth City and Port Adelaide, both began the 1967 league season on a discouraging note.

Both were soundly beaten and both were unable to field their strongest line-ups.

Assessed solely on last year's form, neither club would be able to match the other First Division clubs.

The disturbing fact is, however, that Port and Elizabeth could only muster teams that were well below their strength of last season when they were in Second Division.

The Elizabeth-Enfield marriage was designed to strengthen the code in the "migrant city."

However, the Elizabeth team which lost to Juventus last Saturday contained only five players with previous First Division experience and was without doubt well below the standard of the Enfield side which finished fourth last year.

After losing Tony Batchelor and John Irwin to Hellas, Elizabeth made their first major gain by buying Tom Crawford from Juventus.

This should have heralded the start of brighter days but hardly had Crawford been chosen as coach before John King withdrew from the team.

The former Welsh international took over from Peter Woods as coach in the latter stages of the night series.

Woods was freely tipped to retain the post.

Elizabeth's playing strength deteriorated further when utility player, Joe Hemingway, forwarded a clearance application.

Last week the club was confronted by a spate of verbal enquiries from players contemplating a transfer.

Most of these came from former Enfield players who found that it was inconvenient to travel long distances to Elizabeth to train three times a week.

The club attempted to solve the problem by granting certain men permission to train with other clubs on Tuesday nights.

This arrangement is, as coach Tom Crawford, freely admitted on television, "not satisfactory."

Port Adelaide, who earlier had transferred or put on their transfer list, experienced First Division players like Ted Donnelly, Brian McGreevey, and Jim Cooper, received a body blow on Saturday when John Glen and Denis Randall, refused to play.

Glen, a former Dalkeith Thistle player was Port's outstanding forward during the Ampol series.

Several First Division clubs here and one top Sydney club, made transfer enquiries but were told that Port wanted $4,000 for Glen.

Port chairman Len Alagich, upset by Glen's refusal to play, told SOCCER WORLD that the transfer fee would increase by $40 for each game Glen stands down.

"Glen has not asked for a clearance and has given no reason for his refusal to play," added Alagich.

Port Adelaide drew up a contract which guaranteed Glen $24 per game, win, lose or draw, but the winger would not sign it.

The Port committee had also arranged employment for Glen.

For the sake of their future and that of the competition, it is hoped that Elizabeth and Port iron out their individual troubles.

The awful alternative is that both will become chopping blocks for the stronger clubs.

Croatia waited until right on kick-off time for an overseas permit for their new English forward Billy Birch on Saturday, but to no avail.

Their reply-paid cable was negative but despite the absence of Birch, who had shown great form in trials, Croatia sprang an upset by toppling Ampol Cup runners-up, Polonia.

FIFA RELEASES WORLD CUP SPECIAL REPORT

— By PAUL DEAN —

The Technical Development Committee of FIFA has just released, in published form, its report on the 1966 World Cup finals.

This remarkable little booklet is the result of a decision taken in 1965 to set up a panel of coaches who would study the final stages of the World Cup.

The purpose was to collect factual data and opinion on the preparation of the 16 competing teams and to observe the matches with a view of later submitting a report to FIFA.

The study group was headed by former England manager Walter Winterbottom and included Gavril Katchaline of Russia, Harold Hassel of England, Roger Quinche of Switzerland and Ron Greenwood, also of England, the manager of West Ham United.

One coach was attached to each of the four initial groups and visited team headquarters and watched all matches in that zone.

A questionnaire dealing with selection and preparation of teams, tactics and trends of soccer was also handed out to the coaches and managers in charge of the 16 teams.

Here we publish parts of the Report that deal with the actual preparation and attitude of the 16 finalists.

Although the FIFA subcommittee's report diplomatically doesn't say this, we should point out that in some cases at least the replies of national managers and coaches were not absolutely sincere.

This applies mainly to the payment of incentive bonuses.

In other instances, the report is unfortunately too vague and superficial.

For example, it mentions only two countries of the 16 where patriotism was used as a weapon — whereas it could have safely included all . . .

Brazil is mentioned as the only one who took great care to comfort their players after a lost match — but it can be taken for granted that Brazil were not an isolated case.

It's also wrong to assume, as does this Report, that only the Bulgarians vary their training stint or only the Germans were allowed alcohol: the French, for example, allowed small quantities of wine.

These conclusions of the Report were obviously the result of careless replies by those questioned.

Despite these shortcomings, the Report is extremely interesting, and useful, perhaps even to our coaches in Australia.

It can only be hoped that FIFA will regard this Report as an experiment — and conduct one again in Mexico in 1970, on a much wider scale with more care for details.

Selection and preparation of teams before arrival in England

Of the 16 countries, 11 had one man fully in charge; of these, Hungary and Bulgaria had their manager's selection approved by the FA.

In Switzerland the selection was done by a coach and a committee while North Korea, Mexico, Portugal and Brazil had committees to form their 22-strong squads.

In 10 countries, no compensation was paid to the clubs for the use of international players; in France, Germany, Switzerland and Argentina there was a scale of compensation.

Preparation training

In 15 countries the training was primarily under the direction of the national coach, helped by assistant coaches, a masseur and a doctor.

In Mexico, a technical committee governed the training.

In 13 countries there was collaboration between the clubs to help in the preparation of selected players; in three countries special training was also arranged by clubs after their players had been selected.

Thirteen countries, in their program of fitness training, gave special emphasis to speed.

Bulgaria varied training as much as possible to prevent boredom, the Swiss developed fitness through skill practices and Argentina worked at methods of team co-ordination in actual play.

Preparation after arrival in England

Twelve countries had a set time for players going to bed, but Portugal, North Korea, France and Argentina left it to individual requirements.

About nine hours sleep were required on an average.

All except two teams followed a controlled diet; smoking was forbidden or tolerated under restricted circumstances.

Alcohol was forbidden by 13 countries; West Germany allowed two bottles of beer per evening.

With the exception of Brazil and Hungary, all countries allowed their players to watch other matches, three only by TV; Russia allowed only certain players to watch.

Reserves were made to train harder than selected players, especially the day after a match.

It was considered an important factor that teams should have at least 40 minutes practice on the ground where they had to play later.

Attitude of players

Every country tried to induce "attitudes" towards competition and tension.

Three — Argentina, Italy and Chile — gave players talks, Germany and Korea worked at getting a good team spirit, Mexico and Uruguay emphasised correct behaviour.

Brazil took every psychological factor into consideration while England and Spain made sure that every player had a complete understanding of collective tactics and all their leisure time was occupied.

Only Portugal, France and Hungary took no particular measures in this field.

In building a team spirit, nine countries felt that co-operation and a friendly atmosphere were the chief ingredients.

Uruguay and Mexico thought that financial rewards were also helpful while France looked at this from the individual's point of view.

Russia and Spain felt that patriotism helped to weld the side together, Brazil thought that the feeling of being fit and in championship form with a will to win assisted their spirit.

Eleven countries gave an incentive bonus payment in one form or another.

Brazil and Portugal felt that these bonuses are so usual now that they are of secondary importance; Mexico and Hungary felt that bonuses definitely get results.

Germany, Korea, Bulgaria and Uruguay give no incentive bonus at all.

Medical attention

All teams had a doctor with one or two assistants and a masseur in attendance; some also had a dietician and a qualified physiotherapist.

Twelve kept a check on food whenever possible, eating only national dishes or something similar; Russia were careful about fluid intake but the French tried to live as close as possible to normal continental life.

All except Chile, France and Korea used regular and systematic massage; most preferred showers to baths except when players were injured.

Match day arrangements

All teams followed a set timetable according to the time of kick-off.

Most spent part of the day before an evening match relaxing and with some very light training.

Bulgaria and Portugal did not train at all on match days.

All teams warmed up thoroughly before the matches and Argentina reached the ground two hours before kick-off to give the players a massage.

Eight teams followed a normal routine after the matches, whatever the result; mostly in the form of quiet relaxation but Brazilian officials made special efforts to comfort their players after defeat.

The Germans always had a cold meal after their match.

About half of the teams were told of the selection the day before the match, the other half only on the day itself.

France tried to announce the team as soon as possible and Hungary gave their selection after the previous game so that players could prepare themselves mentally.

Seven countries discussed tactics on the day of the match: Hungary, Portugal, Chile, Russia, Bulgaria, Mexico and Brazil.

The others tried to complete tactical discussions before the actual match day.

The Germans claimed that they discuss tactics so frequently that only a few pointers were required before a game.

There were different views about tactical discussion at half time; several teams used the interval as a means of changing tactics when necessary but some others felt that changes should not be made at that stage as they could lead to confusion.

By the beginning of the 17th century Dutch progress at sea became particularly noticeable. Their aim was to unseat Portugal as a great maritime and colonial power. The Dutch spread out into the Indian Ocean; they were in Sumatra; they built Batavia on the Island of Java to try to take the spice trade away from Portuguese Goa. They were as vicious and brutal as were the other nations during this time raiding the treasure-filled ships of the Spanish, and English, plundering foreign settlements and engaging in fierce sea battles with other navies. Our figure shows a Dutch warship of the early 1600's.
